¹ Another four articles are currently in the peer review and revision process; and six are still in progress.

² Note that some of the co-authors listed here were not part of the project. Also note that these publications are by TWP participants as well as leaders and writing mentors.

³ While some have published materials specifically relevant to African-Caribbean and/or transatlantic themes, others have published in their diverse areas of expertise within the Humanities and Social Sciences. It was not a TWP requirement that participants engage explicitly in transatlantic research/writing.

⁴ Finally, in addition to these publications, there have been several conference papers presented by TWP participants and leaders, and two participants have used the training and begun hosting academic writing workshops for students and clergy in their contexts.
